

Big Brother

You was right.

“You still my Big Brother.”

No matter how old we got

Or who we were around

You will always say to me

“You still my Big Brother.”

I may not always agreed with
What you did and some of the
Things you said but through it all

“You still my Big Brother.”

We were so close to each other

But still so far apart.

No matter how different we are

We still share the same Heart

“You still my big brother”

We started this life out together and

Seems it ended the same way

I pray you heard everything

I said to you. But it's something else

I gotta say:

“You still my Big Brother.”

I love you for the rest of my life. (703 MLK Drive)

Love Always,

Kunta Johnson

Obituary

John 14:2

“In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.”

Sinatra DeAngelo Brewton, affectionately known as “Booman,” was born on March 8, 1976, in Douglas, Georgia, to the late Virginia Johnson Tobler and the late Charlie Lee Brewton. He was raised in Douglas, where he attended the local public school system. Sinatra had a deep love for sports, especially basketball, which was his favorite.

He also enjoyed football, dancing, and making people laugh, bringing joy to everyone around him. Throughout his life, Sinatra worked faithfully in the poultry industry. He was known for his love of family and friends and had a unique way of showing affection. Often, he would greet you with his signature saying, “Yeah, I got you now—get out the vehicle so I can knock you out,” a playful expression that reflected his humor and love. Sinatra touched many lives and connected with people throughout the community in countless ways.

On January 9, 2026, Sinatra was called home to be with the Lord. He was preceded in death by his parents, Virginia Johnson Tobler and Charlie Lee Brewton, and his sister, Lashannon S. Brewton.

He leaves to cherish his memory: one son, Dario Graves; three grandchildren, Matthew Graves, Peyton Graves, and Ja'siah Coleman; one brother, Kunta (Leholmen) Johnson; and a host of aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins, and dear friends.
